1967

oxford school, hartford

a hub of life, a club of life

"All the art of living

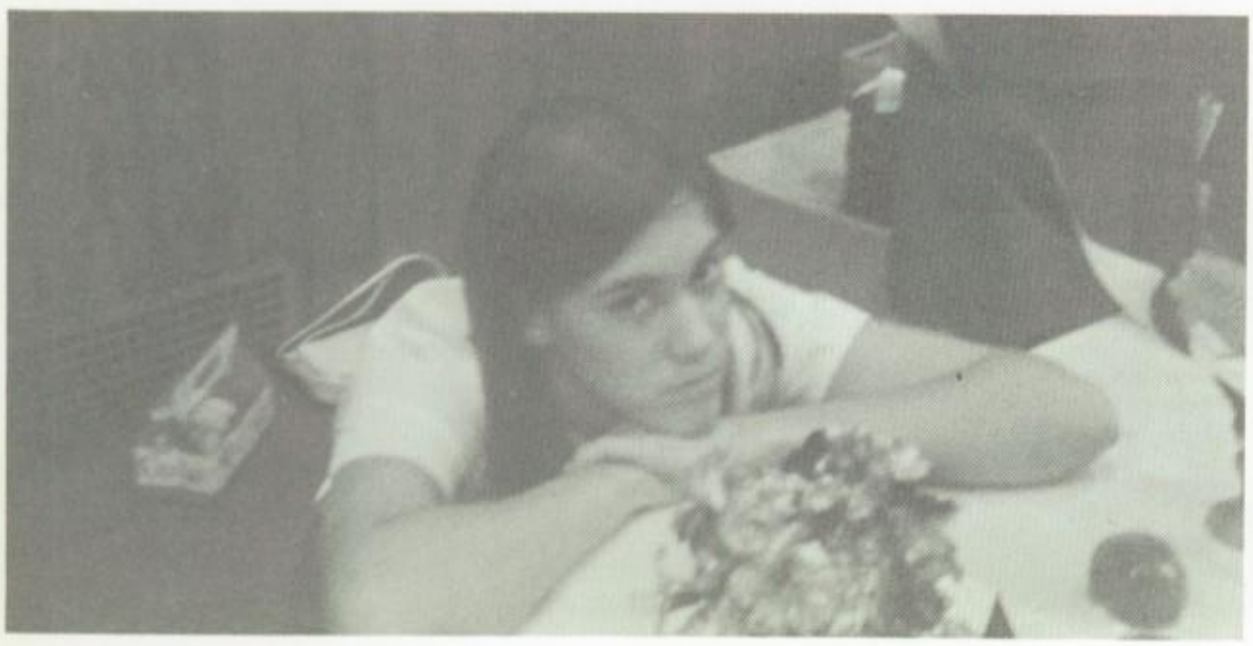
lies in a fine mingling

of letting go

and holding in"

To be involved,

with sense of wonder



with will

and warmth

"The only faith
that is both concrete and comprehensive
is in life,
its abundance and progress."

HISTORY OF

When we were sevens, we looked like this —→

We had vocabulary and spelling tests every Friday and heard stories about Miss Carlisle's dog Whimsy.

We wrote flower reports and played "war" after lunch. We read about Toto, Lili, Jojo, and René. Miss Graff read from the Beatitudes. We sat on the floor during school elections. We tried to decide on a mascot.

In eighth grade homeroom D, we almost did not get into the O.S.A. Miss Mansfield was always rehearsing us in the proper ways to introduce our dates at a dance. We had a square dance with Kingswood. It was Mr. "Cool Mover" Stevenson's first year at Oxford. After our eighth grade plays, there were club tryouts. We tried to decide on a mascot.

Ninth grade—and Oxford girls were "hot stuff." Miss Storrs was always finding our things in her closet. Now in the upper school, we went to our first O.D. There was the study hall roof, Dr. Standish, and conversations in the front of school after lunch. Teachers walked out on us; John, Paul, George, and Ringo came in. We tried to decide on a mascot.

THE CLASS OF '67

Tenth grade brought us to the old building and mornings with Miss Hall and Mr. Dawley. We got free seating at the price of an hour of growling stomachs. We hid in the closet of Room 5, found baked potatoes everywhere, and learned to read faster. We met the Greeks, the Romans, and the tragedian Shakespeare. We tried to decide on a mascot.

As Juniors, we complained about college boards, parking problems, and saltines and tomato juice. Miss Eppley was always talking about stud earrings and round collars. We had discussions in the locker-room lavatory, while the Miserettes rehearsed. We held a car-wash for Janey and wrote a song called "Kingswood Is the One Place to Go." We tried to decide on a mascot. The Class of '66 led us through voting into office and into the Senior lounge and our Senior year—college applications, Herman Melville, lab, Mrs. Forbes' encouragement to show grace under pressure, collages, and setback. We signed out of gym daily, and we went to Trinity. We sang in Bible class, played Twister, made announcements, and ran meetings, but we gave up trying to decide on a mascot.

FUTURE OF

And now at last it's the year '77,
Ten years since Oxford and our Senior heaven.
The class is scattered both far and wide.
Let's take a look and see where they hide.

Nancy is wife of the great pancake king,
Living in his elegant castle at Peiwing.
Good driver Kathy teaches driver's ed;
Her most famous students are, it is said:
Judy the driver and Katie mechanic,
Who won the Grand Prix without any panic.
In the wilds of the Balkamanian frontier,
We find a peasant alias Terry Cavalier,
Pursued eternally by Holtz her slave,
Who proves quite haughty, violent, and brave.
Annie was last seen on an elephant's back,
Exploring the interior of some unknown track.
Janet is running an experimental school,
With majors in beatnik, Dylan, and pool.
In the criminal lab of the F.B.I.,
Head research scientist Lori Hervey we spy.
Cacky goes hitchhiking up the slopes;
With handsome instructors she clings to the ropes.
Betsey is roaming the whole world wide,
Finding Counts to please her, but she can't decide.
Priscilla, remembered for careful conclusions,
Is efficiency expert—IBM Institutions.
Mott, the producer of great applesauce,
Now has Kate Trafford serving as boss.
On TV we all tune to Margaret Gourmet,
Who teaches the ingredients to chocolate parfait.
Mary the model, in London town,
Is most famous for her Kelley gown.
Linda is running a Parisian boutique,
With styles galore as well as unique.
Chrissie's name in big lights is seen
All over Broadway and across the screen.

THE CLASS OF '67

New York's taxi driver is Dana the great,
Who drives with agility and charges high rates.
On Madison Avenue, Bettyann we spy,
Whose business is booming and skyrocketing high.
And looking around for Janey, our beaut,
Last seen yesterday, hopping en route.
To the out-back she's gone in a kangaroo skin,
Waving her boomerang with a song and a grin.
Morgan's a mother with seven little joys:
Four little girls and three little boys.
Sarah is running a knick-knack shop
That's filled with goodies from bottom to top.
Burian and Moss has now doubled its earns,
Since it recently changed to Burian and Stearns.
Our leading ambassador in Saigon at this time
Is trusty Lynn Wijga, who's doing just fine.
The elite jet set, which we read of each day,
Is headed by Alison, who's living quite gay.
Anne Holcombe is internationally known merchant of wine,
A true expert at judging the taste of the vine.
As Birgot Nielson's understudy at the Met,
Barb Rider's a singer never to forget.
This year's Indian chief is Barbie LeBel,
Chosen for guiding her tribe so well.
At last Shirley's talent was given its chance,
For now she runs Arthur Murray's Studio of Dance.
A famous parlor of elaborate ice cream
To both Lyn and Susie had long been a dream;
At last it came true with much to do,
With a menu to swamp both me and you.
Julie goes jumping merrily by:
Her patented pogo stick bounces her high.
Sylvia creates a favorable impression
With foreign ambassadors at each U.N. session.

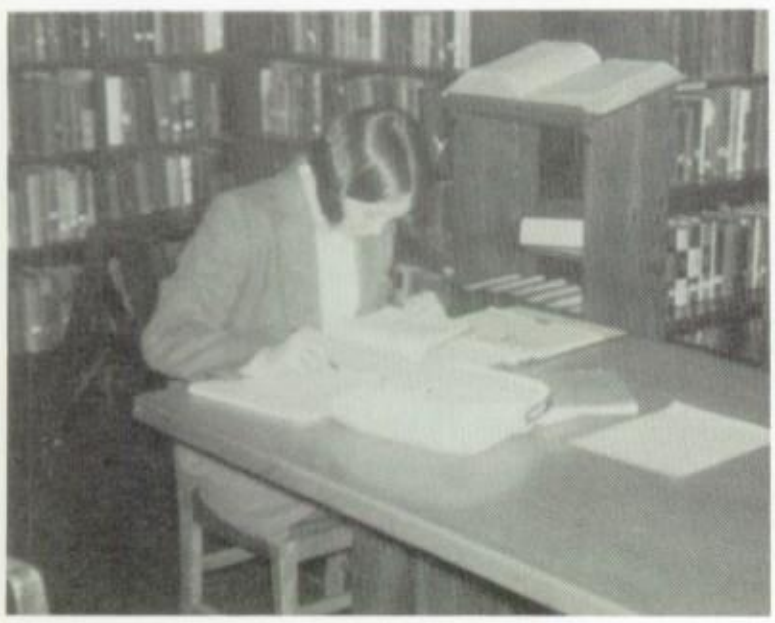
If your mind is now spinning from reading all this,
See Marcia, the learned psychiatrist.
She'll say that these rhymes—so strange do they seem—
Are nothing more than a fanciful dream.

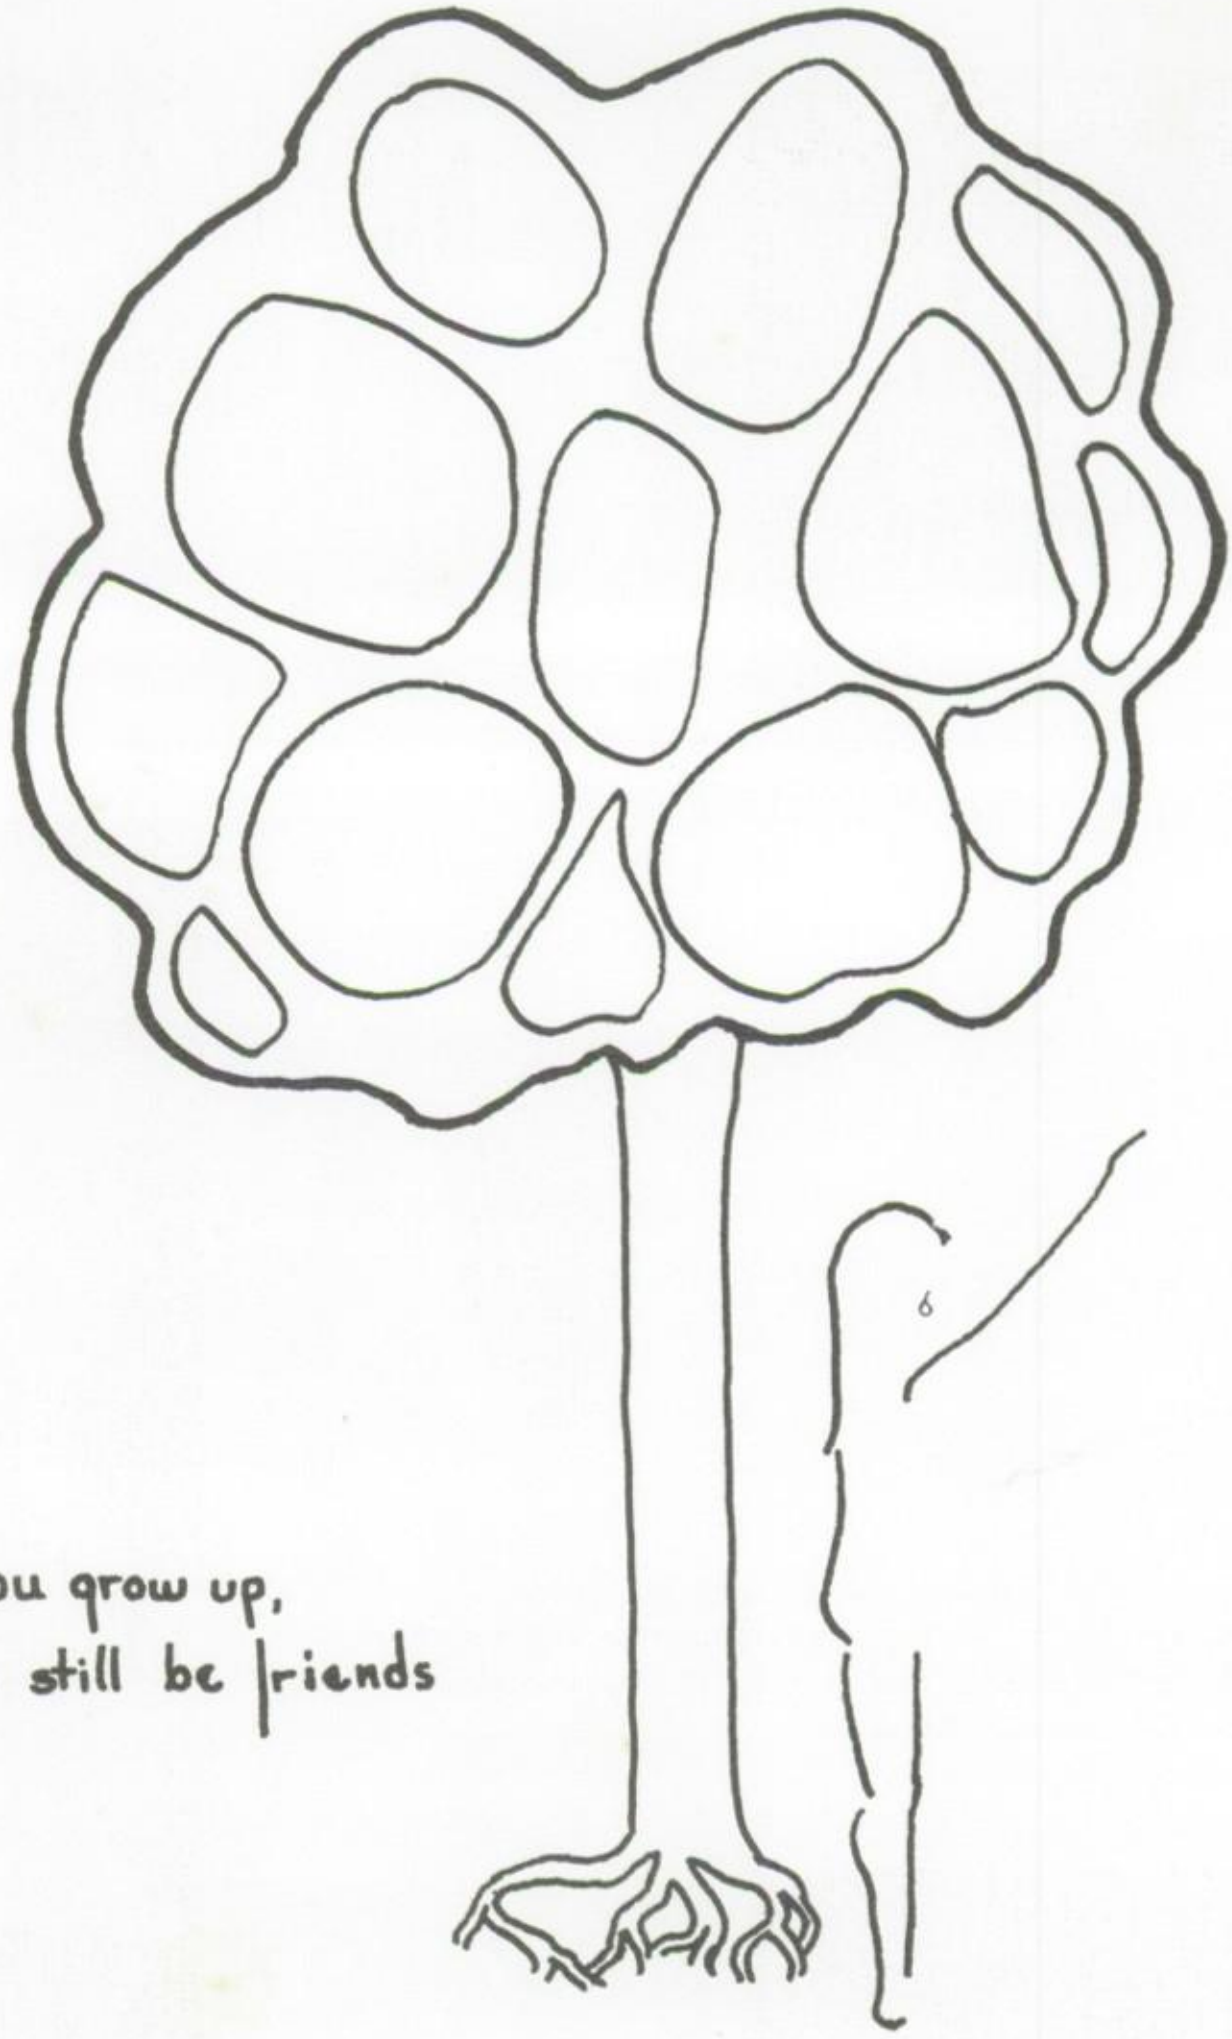
If someone said "Australia" to you, what would you think of . . . kangaroos?

Spring 1966: Class of '67 car wash for our bonza Aussie.

"I really didn't know what to expect when I arrived in Yankee Land at the beginning of August this year. I had scanty visions of movie stars and millionaires, and remembered vaguely a bloke called Washington and his cherry tree . . .

. . . I have studied enough American history now to know that George Washington was responsible for greater actions than chopping down a cherry tree. So you see, I am learning."





when you grow up,
will we still be friends

THERE GOES THE BRIDE

Perhaps the most important single detail in wedding preparations is the selection of the right photographer. After a bride's brief day of glory, only good professional photographs can recall her radiant enchantment and precious delight. Let Burian-Moss keep your joy forever.
